"The Many Worlds of Disneyland"

Here in the wonderful land of the Southwest, the "natives" (a title claimed by anyone who has lived here longer than six months; it used to be at least a year) are bestowed with a kaleidoscope of "worlds" of their own.

There's the mountains and beaches, the deserts and valleys—each a setting unto its own, often as apart in atmosphere and appeal as our plush restaurants versus the tortilla emporiums along our highways.

Within these varied lands of sea and sand and mountain pine, there are "worlds within worlds" that range from the sailing, boating, ocean and pool-side realm of the sun worshippers to the storied glamour of the motion picture and television industry.

But perhaps the most many-faceted of the Southwest's wonderful worlds is the one located where orange and walnut groves once rooted in the sandy soil. Today, in this land, 1910 "horseless carriages" and flying saucers, 1790 sailing ships and "atomic" submarines are contrasted within walking moments of each other.

It is here too that people from many different worlds, often in the native garb of lands scattered from Asia to the Americas, gather to sample a bit of America as it was in the frontier towns and along turn-of-the-century Main Streets . . . to re-live the stories of their childhood . . . to imagine themselves as explorers of dense and colorful jungles . . . and to see some of man's foremost hopes and dreams of tomorrow's life.

For this is the kingdom created by Walt Disney . . . a land that stands alone in its concepts and creations . . . "The Many Worlds of Disneyland."

About the Cover — "Steamboat 'round the bend" . . . cotton bales and Dixieland music that makes you want to sing and dance. Yes, it's an era that's long gone . . . except at Disneyland! Here, the riverboat Mark Twain still plys the muddy waters, and here the Dixieland band still plays every Summer evening. And at Disneyland, high above the twinkling lights of the riverboat, the brilliant colors of the "Fantasy in the Sky" fireworks fill the air every Summer evening at 9 p.m.

ON SAFARI

Tired of civilization? Looking for something really different to do? Well, if a side-trip "far from civilization" sounds intriguing, Walt Disney has come up with the solution.

The password is "Safari," and Summertime visitors to Disneyland will be validating their passports, stepping aboard tropical steamers and sailing off on a brand new tropical adventure that may set jungle exploration back to the days of "Dr. Livingston, I presume."

For Disneyland's brand new Jungle River Cruise—part of another $7 million expansion at Walt Disney's Anaheim wonderland—has been designed as a combination "you are there" exploration and fun-filled, laugh provoking adventure whose "actors" are elephants, tigers and many more beasts of the jungle.

Starting with a proven success—the true-life jungle cruise has been one of Disneyland's most popular attractions since opening—Walt Disney is adding a jungle-full of animated animals—startlingly life-like—and making the explorer's voyage longer and full of humor.

Top highlight is sure to be the Indian elephants—big ones and "little squirts"—who will frolic, splash and swim in a unique "elephant bathing pool." Their trunks loaded with watery surprises (for unwary animals and explorers), nearly two dozen of the full-size elephants will eventually call Disneyland "home," all brought to life through the marvels of Disneyland animation.

The emphasis in new attractions is on Adventureland, with (1) the "world's largest" Tree House, (2) a "Big Game Safari" shooting gallery, (3) a colorful African motif for portions of the bazaar shops and stores in Adventureland, and (4) the fabulous "Stouffer's in Disneyland" dinner-show restaurants.

The Swiss Family Tree House will tower 70 feet above the jungle. Spreading its branches 80 feet in width, it will include three separate "homes" at different levels—the living room, parent's room and boy's room, all inspired by Walt Disney's motion picture "Swiss Family Robinson."

For the youngsters, "the climb's the thing," but adults are sure to enjoy the "never before" panoramic view over much of Disneyland offered by this "species Disneydendron giganteum" of 150,000 leaves and 50,000 blossoms.

Walt Disney's "Enchanted Tiki Room," one of three new restaurants at "Stouffer's in Disneyland" and Disneyland's first "by reservation only" dining spa, may steal the spotlight from the other new attractions. For Walt Disney is bringing together all the talents of his "imaginers" to create a complete dinner show performed by an exotic collection of birds, flowers and Polynesian Tikis that actually sing, talk and act!

Many new animation techniques, developed exclusively for Disneyland, will "bring to life" the birds, idols and flowers. And, lest you should think it's not possible for inanimate objects to sing and act, just remember that this dinner-show is based upon legends and myths treasured for centuries by the natives of the South Pacific.

Stouffer's, one of America's foremost restaurateurs, will also open European and American Kitchens in its Plaza Pavilion (facing Main Street) and a Tahitian Terrace overlooking Adventureland. The latter will feature nightly dancing and South Seas entertainment.

If you're a marksman, the new "Big Game Safari" is for you. While it's based on time-tested shooting gallery tradition, this jungle hunt is an authentic Disney creation—a one-of-a-kind rapid-fire adventure where you'll shoot at all kinds of jungle animals and birds, each handcrafted for Disneyland.

So it all adds up to another big "bonus" in entertainment this Summer at Disneyland... where the new adventures Walt Disney adds each year are the "frosting" on a $40 million entertainment "cake!"

SHOW

TIME

From the "snow-capped" slopes of Matterhorn Mountain to the tropical greenery and tumbling waterfalls of Stouffer's new Tahitian Terrace overlooking Adventureland, Disneyland is literally a "kingdom where entertainment is King" in Summer '62!

Wherever you go in Disneyland this Summer, it's "Showtime" throughout the Park. For over and above the more than 45 adventures and attractions Walt Disney has created from the pages of history, fantasy, yesterday and tomorrow, nearly 150 "live" entertainers perform for you throughout the Summer months in the Magic Kingdom.

Whether it's a marching band of 1890-1910 style along Main Street, or the Spaceman and Spacegirl of the 1980's in Tomorrowland, the Disneyland talent array is spotlighted in the appropriate setting. And what's more, it's all presented entirely free of charge!

Perhaps the most spectacular are Hans and Otto, the mountain climbers, who scale and descend the slopes of 14-story tall Matterhorn Mountain eight times each day. Swinging far out from the mountain, hopping and grasping for hand-holds, they provide a dramatic tableau near the plunging waterfalls and racing bobsleds that have made the Matterhorn one of Disneyland's most popular attractions.

Main Street U.S.A.—America as it was 60 years ago—is the scene of concerts and parades by the famous 18-man Disneyland Band, directed by Vesey Walker. And along the same avenue, while "horseless carriages" and horsedrawn streetcars move leisurely by, the Dapper Dan barbershop quartet swings into "Sweet Rosie O'Grady" or your own requested favorite. Their "stage": a bicycle built for four!

Frontierland has its gun-wielding sheriff and escaping outlaw, shooting it out in western style gunfights . . . its Indian Village presenting ceremonial dances and chants of the tribes of America's Pacific Northwest . . . and its Mexican Trio, performing from the bandstand in the "south of the border" shopping area.

In Tomorrowland, the "modern sound" of the Yachtsmen Quartet resounds from their lofty perch near the Submarine dock and Monorail Station . . . and near the Flying Saucers, you can stop to question those popular folks from the world of the future, the Spaceman and Spacegirl.

For those who like the authentic "saloon" (soft drinks only) atmosphere of the wild West, there's Pepsi Cola's gay and lively Golden Horse-shoe Revue. Here, comedian Wally Boag, Betty Taylor (Slue Foot Sue herself), tenor Fulton Burley and the high-stepping can-can dancers combine for a show that's well past its 10,000 performance—the longest running show in America today!

For the youngsters, and Dads and Moms who enjoy seeing their children and other kids smile and laugh, there's nothing like those fun-loving costumed characters straight out of Walt Disney motion pictures.

Life-size and decked out in costumes authentic in every detail, you'll meet Mickey Mouse, Minnie Mouse, Pluto, Goofy and more than 30 other famous "stars" in the Magic Kingdom.

You'll see the Big Bad Wolf chasing after the Three Little Pigs . . . charming Snow White keeping her friends, the Seven Dwarfs, in line . . . the Mad Hatter, White Rabbit and Alice in Wonderland herself . . . Peter Pan, the Crocodile and Captain Hook . . . Chip 'n Dale and even Pinocchio.

Their all on hand to shake your youngster's hand . . . yours too for that matter! And better yet, don't forget the cameras and film, for these Characters are right in their own element before the cameras.

Many is the King that has visited Disneyland, and they—along with more than 30,000,000 other guests—have been royally entertained . . . here in Walt Disney's Magic Kingdom where entertainment itself is surely King for every day!

MEET ME AT DISNEYLAND!

Hi! I'm a Disneyland tour guide. I enjoy meeting and getting acquainted with the folks like yourself who visit Disneyland. You're invited to join me . . . and a small group of other visitors who like the convenience of a guide . . . for a personally conducted tour through all of Disneyland. My tour lasts about two hours and during this time you'll enjoy some of Disneyland's world-famous adventures, including several that especially appeal to "grown-ups." Adventures such as the exciting Grand Canyon Diorama, the beautiful mine train trip through Nature's Wonderland, the new 2½ mile ride aboard America's longest Monorail, plus several others. Between adventures I'll bring you up to date on Disneyland . . . tell you about how it grew from an idea of Walt Disney's to become the more than $40 million entertainment center that you are seeing during your visit. Our guided tour has been a popular "extra" at Disneyland for the past five years. We've learned that many thousands of visitors at this time of the year really enjoy the opportunity to see Disneyland this special way. We believe you will enjoy it too.

I'll look forward to seeing you on one of my guided tours of Disneyland.

From Film to Fun in Fantasyland

In an introduction to the "Fantasyland" section of his "Guide to Disneyland," Walt Disney writes that "in Fantasyland classic stories of childhood have become actual realities for you to participate in."

Classic stories they are—Peter Pan, Snow White and The Seven Dwarfs, Alice in Wonderland, Dumbo and many more. But, while many are the children who have read them or listened while parents read of Sneezy and Grumpy and the "elephant with aerodynamic ears," it is probable that these famous stories will be remembered best as delightful motion picture entertainment created by Walt Disney.

In the happy Kingdom of Fantasyland at Disneyland, Walt has woven many of the most treasured film moments into some of Disneyland's most memorable adventures. Some are the famous "dark rides"—where black light and animation are combined in an interior setting. Others are outdoors, involving circus train or boat or even giant teacups.

And while many of these attractions in Fantasyland may seem in theory to be child oriented, few are the "grown-ups" who see them without telling their companions: "Sure the kids enjoyed it . . . but you have to be an adult to appreciate that ride."

To cite an example: translated into a "dark ride" in Fantasyland, "Peter Pan" has lost none of its appeal. From the Disney film have come some of the best remembered moments and characters, viewed from a Pirate Galleon that sails high over the streets of London to Never Land, encountering Mr. Smee and the villainous Captain Hook, and the crocodile. And, of course, Tinker Bell herself leads the way.

Nearby, there's the hilarious misadventures of Mr. Toad from "Wind in the Willows." J. Thaddeus Toad, the Baron of Toad Hall, is the "hot rod" of storybook fable. And so at Disneyland, aboard a stylized two-seater auto, you'll duck as barrels topple, jump as policemen whistle, and bounce over the "Road to Nowhere in Particular."

In Fantasyland also, guests "fly high" with Dumbo the Elephant while his "friend and manager," Timothy, cracks the whip . . . meet all the Dwarfs (and even the Wicked Witch) as you tour the diamond mine in Snow White's adventures . . . and travel "down the Rabbit Hole" into the wonderfully mad adventures of Alice in Wonderland.

But for sheer delight, no visit to Fantasyland is complete without a canal boat trip through the gaping jaws of Monstro the Whale into Storybook Land. For here, in painstakingly detailed miniature settings, many of the most famous scenes from Disney films are presented: Gepetto's Village from the story of Pinocchio, nestled beneath the Swiss Alps . . . Cinderella's dream castle high on a hill . . . the forest cottage of the Seven Dwarfs . . . Mr. Toad's waterfront mansion, and many more.

Storybook Land also boasts of one of the world's finest displays of miniature and dwarf succulent plants, adding color and beauty to an area already loaded with entertainment appeal.

From Disney film to Disneyland fun . . . the story of many of the Magic Kingdom's most popular adventures.

COOL SUMMER FUN

The most graphic and exciting story of America's growth and progress is told through the story of transportation, from the frontier days of Davy Crockett to today's new frontier in space. In Disneyland the entire story is unfolded, where visitors to the Magic Kingdom may not only see, but actually experience many phases of the dramatic development of the great American transportation story.

In 62 short years, transportation over land has spread from the horse and buggy days to rapid Monorails; by water, from sailing ships and paddlewheelers to atomic submarines; and by air, from free-flight balloons to flights to the moon. Disneyland not only encompasses much of this saga of American travel, but steps beyond into the future, and the wonderful world of man's imagination.

On entering Disneyland one finds himself in a 1900 setting—a typical turn-of-the-century town. At the Town Square Santa Fe and Disneyland Railroad Station, guests may board one of three trains of the type that once steamed across our frontiers and through our small towns and cities in the late 1800's.

Operated by a standard book of railroad rules, the Passenger train, the Holiday Special or Freight train, and an Excursion train, all circle Disneyland with a view of all the realms of the Park, climaxed by the breathtaking Grand Canyon Diorama.

On stepping off the train, many types of transportation are available for the trip down Main Street, U.S.A. Waiting are a horse-drawn Street Car; a Surrey with the Fringe On Top; or for those more daring, the "horseless carriage" and the double decker Omnibus. The thrill seekers may ride an early American fire engine down Main Street with sirens wailing.

Going a step further back into history, there is Frontierland's Mine Train, with ore cars traveling through Nature's Wonderland where several hundred life-like animals recreate the 19th Century American West. Much of this same scenic wonderland can be viewed by climbing on a pack mule and joining a mule train.

Over Frontierland's waterways, the old Mark Twain Sternwheel riverboat or the Columbia, America's first sailing vessel to circle the globe, will take visitors on a trip down the Rivers of America. One may cross the river by raft to Tom Sawyer's Island, or ride one of the Mike Fink Keel Boats.

Even the jungle rivers of the world may be explored in Adventureland where tropical steamers take visitors on a river safari that winds through native villages, African Veldts, elephant bathing pools and big game reservations.

In Tomorrowland, the story of transportation rides into today and the world of the future. Here visitors may take a Submarine Voyage through liquid space; ride a Monorail out of Disneyland, along a California highway and across a city street to the Disneyland Hotel, then return to the Park; drive an autopia car over the Highways of Tomorrow; pilot an AstroJet or a "Flying Saucer"; or actually become a passenger in a Rocket Ship for a visual flight to the Moon.

Nearby for one of the most exciting sports in transportation, the Bobbed Ride down the slopes of Matterhorn Mountain in Disneyland is one of the Park's most thrilling.

The Skyway, built on the principal of a ski lift, carries you high above the Park between Tomorrowland and Fantasyland. Here you may board the Casey Jr. Circus Train and travel over trestles and bridges and mountains through Storybook Land. A canal boat transports its crew through the mouth of Monstro the Whale for a journey past Geppeto's Village, Dutch windmill country, and many other storybook settings.

In Fantasyland also you can fly high with Dumbo the elephant, drive a real motor boat, or even just go 'round in circles aboard America's most distinctive carousel.

So, if the freeway blues are getting you down, and the thought of an air-conditioned submarine or cool cruise aboard a paddlewheel riverboat sounds inviting, just head for Walt Disney's Magic Kingdom . . . where transportation spans the ages!

AS DIFFERENT AS

Almost since its inception, when Disneyland rode to a crest of public popularity that it has maintained throughout its seven-year history, officials at the Magic Kingdom have been called upon to answer rumors that "another Disneyland" might be built.

The answer has always been a definite "No," for a variety of reasons. But one of the most interesting is actually provided by Summer guests themselves!

As a Disney spokesman has said, "Our guests tell us we already have two Disneylands right here in Anaheim—one by daylight, and a completely different one at night!"

"As Different as Night and Day..." that's what Disneyland's Summer visitors say about the Magic Kingdom's exciting nighttime entertainment program... a talent-loaded evening line-up that features music, dancing, and "live" performers every night throughout the Summer months, 'til midnight weekdays, 1 a.m. Friday and Saturday nights and 10 p.m. on Sundays.

Beginning its every night schedule on Saturday, June 16, Disneyland's nighttime show will once again feature the spectacular "Fantasy in the Sky" fireworks, bursting in a shower of color (see cover) over the Park every evening at 9 p.m.

One of the most spectacular sights is the "lighting" of the fireworks. Every evening at 9, "Tinker Bell"—an aerialist of fame—ascends to the peak of the Matterhorn, steps out into space, and literally "flies" across the Park to touch off the colorful display.

The adult-oriented nighttime entertainment package around Disneyland spotlights dancing and music... the "big band" sounds of the Elliott Brothers at Plaza Gardens... the "Young Men from New Orleans" swinging out with Dixieland jazz aboard the sternwheel riverboat in Frontierland... the exciting authentic dances of the Pacific Islands at Stouffer's Tahitian Terrace overlooking Adventureland... and other performers on various evenings at the Golden Horseshoe, Casa de Fritos, the Pirate Ship Lagoon and Tomorrowland's Space Bar.

Perhaps the excitement of Disneyland After Dark was best summed up by the lady watching the firework spectacular. Overhearing a native of the Lone Star state boast that the fireworks were "real pretty... but we have 'em bigger down in Texas," the lady turned to the Texan with this question: "Every night?"

And that's Disneyland by Starlight for you... an exciting array of music, dance bands and all the Disneyland rides and attractions... every night from mid-June through Labor Day.

NEWS FROM DISNEYLAND

While the major additions to Disneyland for Summer '62 are in the Adventureland area, the Summer season will also present a number of other important additions to the Park—additions that will find Walt Disney again fulfilling his promise that the Magic Kingdom “will never really be completed—that it will continuously grow and add new things.”

In Tomorrowland, the Douglas Aircraft Company—one of America's leaders in the space exploration and jet aircraft fields—will help create a complete outer space story for Disneyland guests as sponsor of the popular “Rocket to the Moon.”

While the authentic “flight” to the Moon will remain basically as it was originally conceived by such experts as Dr. Wernher von Braun and Willy Ley, the passenger departure areas will have a new space theme.

For example: The exterior of the Space Port will present colorful “travel posters” with themes such as “How Will We Dress for a Trip into Space.” Nearby, look-into globes will display three-dimensional models depicting yesterday, today and tomorrow in aviation and space exploration. And, in the few moments while you wait for the rocket “blast-off,” a “Space Newsreel” will keep you entertained and informed.

One of the most interesting things about Disneyland, especially for visitors who have seen the Magic Kingdom before, is to watch it change over the years. Not only are new attractions (25 in seven years) added each year, but “old favorites” are constantly changed and improved.

Such is the case in Frontierland's Indian Village for this Summer. And there's nothing minor about the revisions: It's completely new for Summer '62.

Those of you who saw the Village in the past enjoyed a tour of a mid-America Plains Indian Village. In contrast, this Summer you'll see a Village that represents a composite of Pacific Northwest Indian settlements.

The overall setting is a Village that represents the Blackfeet, Crows and other tribes who inhabited Oregon, Washington, and the lands leading into the Alaskan territory. Special features will include authentic totem poles . . . a ceremonial dancing circle with central fire ring and tiered hillside seating for viewers . . . teepees and “potlatch” houses, the latter complete with artifacts of the Indian culture displayed inside . . . and a Trading Post.

For your dining pleasure, Aunt Jemima's popular pancake house in Frontierland will be bigger and better this Summer, featuring the decor of Old New Orleans, with both indoor and outdoor dining. And for refreshments, if tropical juice drinks are your cup of tea, the new “bazaar” area in Adventureland will offer a wide array this Summer . . . prepared by the folks from Sunkist.

The Bell System, whose 360-degree Circarama film “America the Beautiful” enjoys popularity with both adults and children, has turned its exhibit into a “yesterday, today and tomorrow” of the telephone world. Called “Family Jones and the Telephones,” its a graphic history from the early days to the Telstar communication satellites.

First-time visitors to Disneyland will still be able to enjoy the Park's popular Guided Tour during the Summer months.

Personally conducted by an attractive young lady, the tour covers all of Disneyland, and lasts about two hours. Well versed in the lore of Disneyland, and filled with “behind the scenes” information, your Tour Guide shows you highlights and side-lights of the Park; and you'll sample the famous Disneyland adventures in each land. It's designed especially for the first-time visitor.

Dateline Disneyland

By the Main Streeter

Well, hi there, folks!

You know, so many famous people have been dropping in here at Disneyland in recent months that the friendly people who work here in the Magic Kingdom have been spinning the yarns fast and furious.

Maybe you read that the Christian Science Monitor has called Disneyland "virtually an instrumentality of American foreign policy" because of all the kings, presidents, Prime Ministers and on down the line that tour our "little city."

Anyway, the last time I wrote to you from my favorite "listening post," right here at Swift's turn of the century Market House on Main Street, I told you about the visit by former President Eisenhower and his family... you know, the story about how Wally Boag, who makes amusing animal creations out of balloons, called Ike's granddaughter Mary Jean out of the audience at Frontierland's Golden Horseshoe show and handed her one of his special balloon kits with this message:

"Tell your Granddad that if he learns to blow up these balloons like I do, he'll be a big man in his neighborhood!"

Well, that story set a lot of Disneylanders to thinking back to the visits of other dignitaries, and these are some of the tales I've been hearing:

When Prime Minister Suhrawardy of Pakistan visited Disneyland several years ago, he was seated at a front row table in that same Golden Horseshoe, when comedian Boag—playing his role as Pecos Bill, “the toughest critter west of the Alamo”—suddenly filled the air with pistol shots . . . water pistol, that is.

As it happened, the Prime Minister was in the direct line of fire . . . and as he wiped his face with an aide's handkerchief, frantic State Department officials held their breath for his reaction. Suddenly, the Prime Minister began to laugh.

Puzzled, but much relieved hosts received this explanation: Suhrawardy had suddenly recalled where he had seen Boag before. In London some five years earlier, Wally had pulled the same trick—with identical results!

When King Baudouin of Belgium was here, he asked his host, Walt Disney, why Disneyland's Matterhorn Mountain—snow-capped and as tall as a 14-story building—had holes in it. Walt laughed and replied: “Because it's a Swiss mountain!”

P.S. Walt then explained the real reason, that the Skyway, an aerial trip between Tomorrowland and Fantasyland, glides through the center of Disneyland's Matterhorn.

Well let's see . . . there was the time a lady from Brooklyn mistakenly identified a gold-braided military attache as King Hussein of Jordan. And, pointing at the King himself (wearing a light-gray business suit, American style), she knowingly commented: “That's his valet.”

My nomination for “most difficult explanation” goes to Linda Bird Johnson, daughter of Vice-President Lynden B. Johnson. While her father was accepting his own nomination as the Democrats candidate for the office he now holds, Miss Johnson was nowhere to be found.

The reason: she was dancing to the music of the Elliott Brothers band . . . at Disneyland!

Russians have provided plenty of “hot copy” with their reactions to Disneyland. A group from the Moscow Symphony Orchestra proved to be no exception.

Reporters covering their tour were anxious to obtain a photo of the Soviet citizens near the Trip to the Moon in Tomorrowland, and through an interpreter finally managed to convey their request to the group. Animated discussion among the Russians followed. Finally, a chorus of laughter broke out, and the smiling interpreter turned to reporters.

“They want to know,” he said, “whether your government will guarantee the return trip!”

And speaking of Russians, Mike Glandon, who entertained children and their parents on weekends as one of Disneyland's life-size “Three Little Pigs,” is still chuckling about a recent visit by a group of Soviet citizens.

At nearby Chapman College, Mike had taken two courses in the Russian language. When one of the visitors approached him here at Disneyland, “Practical Pig” greeted the Soviet with a “Hello Comrade”—in perfect Russian!

The startled Soviet quickly consulted one of his companions; then both rushed off at top speed, pausing only to cast a suspicious glance at “Practical Pig.” Which still leaves Mike Glandon amused but puzzled: he doesn't know whether the Russians thought he was a C.I.A. “plant”—or were offended that a “pig” could speak their language!

Well folks, guess that's about all the news from Main Street and the rest of the Magic Kingdom. Time to wander over and watch a few of my friends you may not have heard too much about . . . like the glassblower in the Arcade, the sidewalk artists drawing portraits of visitors, and the silhouette specialists down the avenue.

That's Disneyland for you . . . something new and unusual every step of the way . . . and always something fondly remembered from “the good old days” on Main Street U.S.A.
